Working Papers

1. “A Strategic Model of Software Dependency Networks” (with Angelo Mele, JHU Carey) – Available on SSRN;

Abstract: Modern software development involves collaborative efforts and re-use of existing software packages and libraries, to reduce the cost of developing new software. However, package dependencies expose developers to the risk of contagion from bugs or other vulnerabilities. We study the formation of dependency networks among software packages and libraries, guided by a structural model of network formation with observable and unobservable heterogeneity. We estimate costs, benefits and link externalities of a package maintainer, using a scalable algorithm and data from 1,131,342 dependencies of 17,081 packages of the Rust programming language. We find evidence of a positive externality created by coders on other coders through the creation of dependencies. We also find that homophily and competition motives coexist in the creation of the network.

2. “Contagious Zombies” (with Christian Bittner, Deutsche Bundesbank; and Falko Fecht, Deutsche Bundesbank); Available online;

Abstract:

Does banks’ zombie lending induced by unconventional monetary policy also allow zombie firms to leverage their trade credit borrowing? We first provide evidence suggesting that—even in Germany—particularly weak banks used the European Central Bank’s very long-term refinancing operations (VLTROs) to evergreen exposures to zombie firms, which in turn elevated credit risk. Second, we show that zombie firms, which obtained additional funding from banks relying to a larger extent on VLTRO funding, also increased their accounts payable and advance payments received from downstream and upstream firms. And third, zombie firms that obtained further bank funding and such trade credit after the VLTROs had an elevated expected default probability even compared to average zombie firms. This suggests that suppliers relying on banks’ lending decisions as a signal about borrowers’ credit quality might be misled by banks’ zombie lending to extend more trade credit to zombie firms exposing suppliers to elevated contagion risk.

3. “Anticipated Financial Contagion” (with Toni Ahnert, ECB, and Gideon du Rand, Stellenbosch) – Available on SSRN;

Abstract: How likely is financial contagion when banks anticipate an aggregate liquidity shock and what are the consequences for bank choices, welfare, and regulation? We study an economy with two regional banks that insure risk-averse consumers against their idiosyncratic liquidity shocks and hold interbank deposits to co-insure against regional liquidity shocks. An aggregate liquidity shock hits one of the banks with positive probability and can lead to contagion—the mutual default of banks. We numerically characterize the equilibrium and show that contagion is rare: it occurs in approximately 5% of the parameter space and its ex-ante probability is below 1%. For likely aggregate liquidity shocks, the decentralized economy achieves the same expected utility as a global bank benchmark, which we fully characterize analytically. For less likely liquidity shocks, the economy is constrained inefficient. To shield themselves from contagion, banks hold inefficiently low interbank positions (co-insurance) and excessive liquidity (self-insurance). Efficiency is restored via an alternative bank resolution scheme.

4. “Similar Investors” (with Diane Pierret, University of Luxembourg; and Sascha Steffen, Frankfurt School of Finance and Management) – Available on SSRN;

Abstract:

With the failure of Silicon Valley Bank in March 2023, the concentration risk in bank liabilities has come under scrutiny. We use detailed security-level holdings of U.S. Money Market Mutual Funds (MMFs) that fund banks to introduce a novel measure of portfolio similarity among investors. Our findings suggest that MMFs actively manage their asset holdings based on the similarity of their portfolios with those of other investors. Specifically, when portfolios are more similar, investors are less likely to roll over investments, anticipating higher expected joint liquidation costs when portfolios are more similar. At the issuer bank level, the average similarity of its investors’ portfolios is a reliable predictor of the bank’s total funding in the following period. Importantly, banks are unable to fully compensate for the loss of funding when similar investors withdraw.

White papers

1. “Central Bank Digital Currency Global Interoperability Principles” (World Economic Forum Whitepaper) (2023) – Available online.
2. “Issuing Central Bank Digital Currency Using Algorand” (with Andrea Civelli, Pietro Grassano, and Naveed Ihsanullah, Algorand Inc) – Available on the Algorand website (2021).
3. “A Trustless System for Data Ownership” (with Sabine Bertram, UCT) – Available online (2020). This white paper is the foundation for our pending patent “System and Associated Method for Ensuring Data Privacy” (US 16/811,653; PCT/IB2020/051959).
4. A privacy-preserving system for data ownership using blockchain and distributed databases (with Sabine Bertram, UCT) – Available on arxiv.org (2018). This white paper is the foundation of our startup registree.io.

AWARDS AND GRANTS

Algorand Foundation

2021 – 2026

Algorand-UCT Innovation Hub (USD 2,650,000)

I am the Director of the Algorand-UCT Financial Innovation Hub that will accelerate the university's research on blockchain and financial technology and support students starting their own companies. We focus on five related research themes on blockchain applications, privacy, cyber security, central bank digital currencies, and financial inclusion.

Ripple

2021 – 2026

University Blockchain Research Initiative (USD 100,000)

This grant supports our ongoing work on blockchain with a focus on the interoperability of central bank digital currencies.

South African Reserve Bank

2018 – 2023

Research Chair in Financial Stability Studies (ZAR 14,800,000 (~ USD 1,000,000))

I hold the SARB Research Chair in Financial Stability Studies. The Chair focuses in particular on financial interconnectedness and the intersection of financial stability and financial innovation.

Nautilus Technologies (<https://ntls.io>)

Co-Founder and CTO

06/2021 – 10/2023

Nautilus combines a cloud storage- and computing solution with a licensing platform for code and data. Currently, privacy concerns prevent users from monetizing their data: if a user provides data to a third party, she loses control over their use and the ability to monetize them further. Our patent-pending technology allows groups of users to jointly monetize even private data by licensing it to third parties without loss of privacy. Current status: Post-revenue; 8 Employees; Raised >USD 100,000. Associated Patent (pending): US 16/811,653; PCT/IB2020/051959.

Registree Rocks (<https://registree.io>)

Co-Founder and CEO

12/2017 – 07/2021

Registree is a decentralized student database and platform that connects universities, students, and employers. The project is driven by students and staff at the University of Cape Town. The Registree platform provides a number of valuable data services for its stakeholders, entirely without collecting any data from the students or from the universities. Current status: Post-revenue; 2 Employees; Raised >USD 200,000.
